Now, after the disclosures of our July inventory taking, all the great mass of our seasonable summer goods has been thrown into A VAST ECONOMY SALE. We have ever so much more than we thought we had, and, with the influx of new goods which is about to commence coming in, we will be snowed under unless heroic measures are taken to turn goods into money. Money doesn't take up room; goods do. It's economy for us to present you with summer goods now at desperately low prices, so that the incoming of our early fall stocks may not be retarded. Our buyers have been piling up autumn orders in the East for weeks past, and summer goods must be moved rapidly. That it is economy for you to buy at this time and place is evidenced most strongly in our prices and goods.
